

For the Farmer.

OHIO AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

Our readers have learned from the columns of the Ohio Farmer, that this Institution, which was established at Oberlin, and of which the first course of lectures was delivered in that place the last winter, has been removed to the city of Cleveland, where it will now be permanently located. The removal was made with the consent and approbation of all the parties concerned. While the patrons of the infant enterprise saw and felt that Oberlin possessed great advantages as the site for such an Institution, they have decided that on the whole, the location of the School at Cleveland would secure the permanent interests of Agriculturists in a higher degree. Among the reasons that led to this conclusion are the following:—Cleveland is the great commercial emporium for a region. It calls together more of those who represent the Agricultural interests, than any other town in the vicinity. It is accessible by a greater number of Railroads than any other town in the northern portion of the State. There are more men, too, in this city, who are both able and willing to bear the burthens which must be borne by somebody, in communicating such an influence, than have been found elsewhere. These men have stepped forward and provided suitable rooms for the course of lectures to be delivered, and have secured other facilities for the prosecution of Agricultural science on the part of the students who may attend.

The organization of the College is now complete. The names of its Trustees, with an account of the meeting at which they were appointed, was given in the Farmer of September 1st. Any one who will glance at the list will see that they are a body of men who are accustomed to accomplish what they design; and it is our belief that they will do all that their individual energy would lead us to expect they would, and all that their official position lays them under obligations to do for the success of the College.

"Good morning, Coleman," said Mooney without rising.
"Good morning," responded Coleman; "I am glad to see you. Are you here now—I mean are you located in this hotel?"
"Yes sir."

"Glad to hear that, too. You'll find the Leland's first rate men; you'll like them, I know."

"Clever fellows!" exclaimed Coleman who wondered how Mooney would dare speak so disrespectfully of his employers; "they are excellent men, and you ought to be proud to be with them!"

"I am," said Mooney, puffing out from his mouth a fresh cloud of tobacco smoke.

"Well, Mooney," resumed Coleman, "I wish you well, and I would rather have you at our house than see you here—"

"I'll be sure to come to you shortly," interrupted Mooney, with a patronizing air.

"But no," continued Coleman, "while you do well, stay here. Let me give you a piece of advice, however—the Leland's are, as I said before, excellent, easy, good-natured men; but they do not like to be imposed upon. If they see you here smoking cigars, and making free with the guess, they will most likely tell you to leave the house."

"Sir?"
"My advice is," continued Coleman with a parental look, "that you never show yourself here; stick to your own apartments, otherwise I could swear you'd be discharged."

"Why, what the devil do you take me for?" cried Mooney, starting to his feet, and displaying an elegant ruffle shirt-boom and a cable watch chain.

"A waiter of course!"

"No sir!" was the reply, "I'm a boarder, here, and I'm a member of the Legislature!"

Coleman left after having made a very flowery apology. He acknowledged himself done—completely. With such lawnmakers as Mooney we ought to flourish, ought we not?

CAN YOU REACH THEM PERTAINING TO THIS?

Many of your readers have no doubt read the following sich anecdote. It is old, but is like good wine, it will bear repetition. Those who have never had a "read it" will thank us for reviving it from the oblivion into which it was fast falling:

Several gentlemen of the Massachusetts Legislature, dining at a Boston Hotel, one of them asked Mr. M., a gentleman who sat opposite—

"Can you reach the pertains, sir?"

Mr. M., extending his arms towards the dish and satisfied himself that he could reach the "pertains," and answered—

"Yes sir."

The legislator was taken aback with the unexpected rebuff from the wag; but presently recovering himself, he asked,

"Will you stick my fork into one of 'em then?"

Mr. M. took the fork and very coolly plunged it into a finely cooked potato, and left it there! The company hurried, as they took the joke, and the victim looked more foolish than before; but suddenly an idea struck him, and rising to his feet, he exclaimed, with an air of conscious triumph—

"Now, Mr. M., I will trouble you for the fork."

Mr. M. rose to his feet, and with the most impudent gravity, pulled the fork out of the potato, and returned it, amidst an unceasing thunder storm of laughter, to the abject discomfiture of the gentleman from B—

A talking match finally "came off" at New Orleans for five dollars a side. It continued, according to the Advertiser, for thirteen hours, the rivals being a Frenchman and a Kentuckian. The bystanders and judges were talked to sleep, and when they woke up in the morning they found the Frenchman dead, and the Kentuckian whispering in his ear.

Truth is like a torch, the more its stock it burns.
